HELP WITH ANECA ACCREDITATION

The SLU-Madrid library can help you in the process of searching for signs of quality of your publications for ANECA Accreditation.

1. What is ANECA Accreditation?

PEP (Academic Staff Recruitment Assessment Programme)

The Academic Staff Recruitment Assessment Programme (PEP) set up by ANECA assess academics' teaching and researching performance as a compulsory requirement for hiring by public or private universities. These evaluations are free of charge.

In particular, this programme evaluates the teaching and research activities and the academic background of applicants for access to the positions of Contracted University professor established in the LOMLOU:

- Assistant Doctoral Professor (PAD)
- Contracted Doctoral Professor (PCD)
- Private University Professor (PUP): Accreditation is not a requirement, but having it increases the chances of being hired. Currently, the law requires that 50% of private university faculty must have a doctoral degree, and 60% must have obtained a positive evaluation from ANECA.

The accreditation implies a positive evaluation of the applicant's teaching and research curriculum.

2. Information on the procedure

- Call open all year round.
- Resolution period: 6 months from the registration of the application.
- The positive evaluation for the figure of PCD accredits for the hiring of PAD and PUP.
- Accreditation can only be requested for one area of knowledge.
- It is necessary to be in possession of the title of DOCTOR.
- The level of requirement depends on the evaluation criteria published in the corresponding Resolutions, which value differently the weight of these two facets (teaching and researching) in each of the figures. The development of these criteria and their application is published in the document: Principios y orientaciones sobre los criterios de evaluación.
